

TRENDING

AT A GLANCE

Dual Enrollment Yields Promising Results

Highest outcomes among dual-enrollment students who first attended a community college after high school

Source: Community College Research Center and National Student Clearinghouse Research Center, "What Happens to Students Who Take Community College 'Dual Enrollment' Courses in High School?" September 2017.

—CHAT SNAP—

Jared C Wastler | @jcwastler

Q4: How have you provided professional development and coaching for teachers?
#APChat

Jody Ratti | @JCRattiFCPS

A4: Our district bought every teacher the Distance Learning Playbook, and I'm training a class on virtual learning strategies so that I can provide real feedback, and not just boilerplate niceties after observations. #APChat

Nathalie Princilus | @NatPrincilus

A4: During our last PD day, we had a number of staff members take the lead in facilitating mini tech sessions on strategies [that] they have found impactful to effective remote learning lessons. These mini sessions allowed staff to learn and collaborate with each other. #APChat

Join our weekly Twitter chats on Sunday evenings:
#APChat and #PrinLeaderChat

PRINCIPOLL

How is your school reimagining education in light of COVID-19?

Getting 1:1 devices to all students
59%

Offering more voice and choice with personalized learning
20%

Other*
14%

Creating resources through community connections
3%

Encouraging virtual field trips to enrich learning
3%

59 votes

*Respondents who selected "Other" could fill in the field with their own responses. Answers included "all/combination of the above," "hybrid learning options," and "more meaningful use of technology."